GOVERNMENT OF ABU DHABI
MINISTRY OF EDUCATION EDUCATIONAL POLICY

1972 - 1973

1. There is no doubt that the educational policy of any modern country should be closely connected with its social, economic and political trends. In the Ministry of Education in Abu Dhabi, we see this connection in terms of the objectives, the substance, and the values of Islamic education in the service of man. Our educational policy aims also at fulfilling the needs of the state with regard to democracy, social justice, equality, and the advance of modern technology. All this is designed to fulfil the instructions given by His Highness, Sheikh Zaid, Ruler of Abu Dhabi and President of the United Arab Emirates, who has declared : " Education is the light by means of which man finds the true path of life."

2. In the light of these instructions, education becomes the right of all, old and young, throughout the entire country: In cities, towns, villages and deserts. It belongs to all men since it is based on the firm conviction that real progress is dependent upon the quality of the human element in society.

3. The main aims of education in Abu Dhabi are:

- A) To develop the personality of the student in terms of the tenets of our religion and the needs of contemporary society.
- B) To strengthen the spirit of union among our students in establishing a unified and harmonious society.
- C) To acquire, in all its aspects, the scientific and technological skill necessary to a modern society both for today and for the future.
- D) To train students to work and serve their society, preparing them for a practical and productive life, thus guiding a generation dedicated to maintaining the dignity and well-being of our country.
- E) To promote through the medium of a life-long education an understanding of the human condition both at home and in the world.

4. The present:

Some statistics related to the progress of education in Abu Dhabi illustrate best, perhaps, the extent of the progress achieved in this field. At the beginning of the five-year plan, the number of students did not exceed 800. Today that number has increased to over 16000 of both sexes. It is anticipated that this figure will be doubled in the next few years.

During the initial stages, we placed most emphasis on the spread of education; reorganising and improving school administration; maintaining a high level of academic attainment; developing curricula; providing health care for children; and generally initiating activities designed to develop student personality. One important aspect of these measures is cooperation with other Ministries in the field of technical as well as language training.

5. The future:

Our aim is to attain the necessarily limited objectives we set ourselves while bearing in mind the ultimate standards upon which higher education must be based and by which the educational as well as the practical values of our citizens' lives must eventually be assessed.

In establishing an efficient educational administration, we propose a gradual diminution of the present system of centralisation. This process would envisage the Ministry of Education as the centre for planning and general supervision, while local authorities of education both in Abu Dhabi and Al Ain would exercise delegated authority over their particular areas. The intention is to encourage all levels within the school system to make their own contributions to educational policy and to indentify themselves with the national effort.

The school building programme is based on our educational requirements in terms of our local environment, while recognising the need to provide for recent advances in educational technology.

On the cultural level, the Ministry gives every encouragement to the arts and to the formation of school societies as well as to T. V. and radio programmes. It is also proposed to develop school libraries including a children libray both in Abu Dhabi and Al Ain.

The Ministry is also interested in establishing a kindergarten system within the context of our local traditions.

In order to integrate theory with practice it is planned to incorporate commercial and industrial training sections for boys in the new secondary premises, as well as commercial and home economics sections for girls.

With regards to more advanced learning, it is proposed to elevate the programme of the existing Islamic Institute to the status of a centre for higher studies (i.e. Sharia). Also under consideration in this context is a college of commerce and business administration as well as teacher-training.

This three-year plan will be followed by a five-year plan providing for further development of curricula to include the most recent advances in educational technology (e. g. Television as an educational medium) in addition to preparing the way for a general system of higher education.

Finally, all these projects are directed towards strengthening the spirit of community among our young people, thus enabling them to participate in the modern educational developments and to maintain effectively their country's high standard of achievement to keep pace with an ever-changing world.
